Workplace Safety Training Overview

This one day training programme introduces those seeking employment together with new, inexperienced and transferred workers to issues relating to health and safety at work. It will help the employee interact with supervisors, co-workers, work areas, and jobs, and especially to health and safety. Training and extra assistance during the initial period of employment is critical, regardless of the age of the employee, as workers are not familiar with the hazards of the job or the workplace.

During an orientation or induction phase, each worker develops the knowledge, skills, and abilities that are necessary to work in a safe and healthy manner. While training (or refresher training) is always important, training should always be provided when employees are:

- transferred to jobs or work areas they are unfamiliar with
- returning from an extended period away from work
- who are new to the work force

It is also of benefit to persons seeking employment to show prospective employers that they appreciate the value of positive health and safety initiatives in the workplace.

Not all training can or should be done on the first day. Time the orientation sessions to best match the needs of the workplace and the work done, but be sure all areas are covered.

Our one day training is not a replacement for full safety induction training but is designed to give the participants a good grounding in health and safety where further induction training specific to the workplace and job can be carried out on-site.

Why should you attend?

Speakers

National Irish Safety Organisation

A speaker from the National Irish Safety Organisation (NISO) will participate in this programme. NISO's speakers are health and safety professionals with the experience and know-how to deliver exceptional training, sharing insights and real life scenarios. When it comes to safety training, the ability to apply lessons to real life situations is imperative – our training objectives go beyond simply getting our learners through the course.

Health and Safety Authority

An inspector with the Health and

BeSMART.ie

Safety Authority's BeSMART programme will discuss the role of the Health and Safety Authority together with employer and employee obligations as required by workplace health and safety legislation. An overview of the BeSMART programme which simplifies identifying risks which may lead to accidents will also be provided together with the importance of consultation within the workplace.
